

Dermatology Surgery

Skin Surgery is needed for many dermatology problems. A local anaesthetic is injected around the lesion to numb the area. The lesion is then removed and sent off to the pathology lab for analysis. The area may require stitches depending on the size of the lesion removed. A dressing is applied to keep the area clean and help prevent infection.

All surgical procedures are carried out in our dedicated dermatology surgery room at Health Services at Wolves. We use single-use, disposable instruments for all procedures. This means that a brand new set of instruments is used for each patient. Once used, the instruments are disposed of.

We realise that many people can feel anxious when they attend for surgery. Our staff are friendly and reassuring and will answer any questions you have.
